1976-77 CAMPFINDER

Purpose of This Directory:

Your choice of a camp for your child will be based on many factors – among them the competency of its staff, the wholesomeness of the food, high standards of health and safety, and a program which is of interest to the child you have in mind. Each should be discussed with the individual camp director before a final choice is made.

This Directory can help you narrow your choice by providing basic information about each camp, including fees, length of session, size, location, and the agency to which further questions should be directed. Listed are resident and day camps which are sponsored by non-profit organizations; and camps, regardless of sponsorship, providing special services for children who are mentally retarded, emotionally disturbed, and physically handicapped.

A listing in the Campfinder is not necessarily an endorsement of any camp by the United Community Planning Corporation.

How To Use This Directory:

The Campfinder is divided into three sections: Resident Camps, Day Camps, and Camps With Specialized Services. Camps are listed alphabetically by sponsoring agency. Alphabetical listings by camp name will be found in the index. For ease of identification, the overnight and day camps are sub-grouped as Boy Scout Camps; Camps Under Church-Related, Specific Cultural or Religious Auspices; Four-H Clubs Camps; Girl Scouts Camps; and YM-YWCA Camps. Many of these camps, it should be said, routinely accommodate handicapped campers within their larger numbers of enrolled campers.

Although the column headings are mostly self-explanatory, the following comments may be helpful:

Accreditation by the American Camping Association – The letters "A.C.A." following the name and location of the camp signify accreditation by the American Camping Association. Although an A.C.A. approval provides you with some guidance in selecting a camp, careful individual followup is still necessary. A.C.A. teams do not visit all camps. The absence of a rating does not necessarily imply that the rating has been withheld. Such camps may have very high standards. If you are interested in a camp without an A.C.A. rating, ask the director about it.

Fee Reductions – Some agencies have campership funds available for supplementing fees. Amounts vary with the agency and the circumstances surrounding each individual case. Possible fee reductions are listed in the fee column. Further information may be obtained directly from the sponsoring agency.

Possible Rate Changes - Camp fees are subject to change. Please check fees directly with the sponsoring agency. Also ask for specific information on such items as advance registration payment, cost of pre-camp medical exam, bus fare to and from camp, camper insurance coverage, camper canteen expenses, etc.

Title IV-A Camping – The numerals "IV-A" following the name and location of the camp indicates the camp has provided camping services during recent summers for low income children with funding under Title IV-A of the Social Security Act. The Index includes a separate listing of camps participating in the Title IV-A program. Because of Federal legislative changes, Title IV-A has been superceded by Title XX and, beginning with the summer of 1976, camping programs under such funding will carry a Title XX designation.

Year-Round Facilities – Those camps with winterized facilities, or capable of accommodating groups for retreats, conferences, training programs, week-end or short-term trips, are identified in a separate Index listing.

PURPOSES OF CAMPING

Camping provides a child with an intensive experience in cooperative group living. Learning to live away from his family and from familiar surroundings can contribute greatly to a child's social skills, self-reliance and general maturation.

Cooperative group living often heightens a child's motivation to learn. Life-long skills in athletics and swimming, pioneering and crafts are learned simultaneously with a respect and love for natural surroundings and respect for the contributions and rights of others. Most of all, a child becomes more objective about his own strengths and weaknesses.

Two factors contribute most to a child's successful camp experience: First, a camp philosophy that respects individual differences and diverse interests and believes individual campers and cabin groups should be encouraged to assume as much responsibility as they can for their daily lives and activities within the camp community; secondly, a staff which can carry out this philosophy and help children over the inevitable rough spots.

Day camping is, in many respects, a service distinct from resident camping. It permits children ongoing contact with their parents, friends, and a familiar environment. The fact that children are not completely dependent upon their counselors or upon their acceptance by other group members, makes day camping an appropriate choice for younger children, for children who are emotionally disturbed or physically handicapped, and for children from unstable homes. Day camp also serves as a transitional experience, facilitating later adjustment in resident camping.

SOME POINTERS FOR PARENTS

A camp's philosophy and program should be geared to a child's personality and interests. Try to get the following information directly from the camp staff:

How large are the groups? Eight to ten children is considered best, depending on age. Is at least one counselor responsible for each group? Will your child be under supervision at all times? How close in age are the groups? A 12-18 months age span is most comfortable for children because of similar social and physical capabilities and interests. What is the age and background of counselors and other staff? What activities are available at camp? Which of these are traditionally emphasized? Do individual children and cabin groups have a voice in determining what they will do? What are the provisions in case of illness or accident?

Also, ask about visiting days for parents and about required and suggested clothing and personal items which should be brought to camp. In day camps, check the time and place where the bus will pick up and drop off your child.

Involve the prospective camper in all aspects of planning for his stay at camp. Whether a child really wants to go to a resident camp and for how long, is a hard question for him to answer if he has never been away. Two to four weeks are advisable for a first timer. Readiness for camp can be gauged partly by a child's age, his maturity and self-reliance in other areas, and his ability to get along and feel comfortable with children his own age. Talk over any doubts with the camp director and with your child.

Tell your child as much as possible about the camp he will attend and about camping in general. Where possible, he should visit the camp beforehand and meet some of the staff. Ask the director for the names of some of the children who know the camp and are planning to return. Your child can get firsthand information and perhaps make a friend through such pre-camp contacts.

Write your child frequently while he is away at camp. Don't expect too many letters in return. When a child is away at camp, no news usually means good news!

ADDITIONAL CAMPING RESOURCES

Camps Providing Special Services – Many camps provide special services for children whose needs require them. Some camps serve children of special needs exclusively, such as a camp for overweight or diabetic children; while many other camps serve handicapped children with special needs on an integrated basis. See the third section of the directory for a listing of camps and day camps with specialized services.

The Greater Boston Association for Retarded Children conducts a camper referral service, and has available a list of camps qualified to serve retarded children. For information contact the GBARC at 42 The Fenway, Boston, MA 02215; telephone (617) 266-4502.

The Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults refers physically disabled children to resident and day camps in cooperation with referring agencies. Placement is in camps with able-bodied children whenever the nature of a child's handicap permits. For further information contact Donald A. Perry, Director of Camping, Easter Seal Society, 37 Harvard Street, Worcester, MA 01608, or any regional Easter Seal Society office.

Cambridge Camping Association – This agency arranges whole or partial camperships to provide camping experiences for children from Cambridge, Somerville, and other contiguous cities and towns, ages 7-14, referred by agencies, schools, churches or individuals. The Association selects the appropriate resident or day camps and attends to registration. For further information, contact Mrs. Roberta Kalinoski, Secretary, 99 Bishop Richard Allen Road, Cambridge, Massachusetts 02139; telephone (617) 864-0960.

Resource Book – Information on summer camps and schools for children with physical and mental handicaps or learning problems is published in The Sargent Guide to Summer Camps and Summer Schools, 17th edition, 1973; 480 pages, $3.00 paper bound, $5.00 cloth bound. Call or write, Porter Sargent Publisher, 11 Beacon Street, Boston, MA 02108; telephone (617) 523-1670.

Private Residential and Day Camps – Many private camps, residential and day, located throughout New England are accredited by the American Camping Association. A listing of these, and agency camps, may be purchased from the New England Camping Association, 29 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, MA 02116; telephone (617) 536-0225.

TRAINING PROGRAMS FOR COUNSELORS

Natural History and Ecology – The Massachusetts Audubon Society offers a "Counselor's Workshop in Natural History and Ecology." Sessions are held in June of each year at Drumlin Farm, Lincoln, Massachusetts (5 days, non-resident), and at Wildwood Nature Center, Barre, Massachusetts (7 days, resident). Address inquiries and requests for brochure to: Charles Roth, Director of Education, Massachusetts Audubon Society, Lincoln, MA 01773; telephone (617) 259-9500.

Mountain Leadership Workshops – The Appalachian Mountain Club, through its Mountain Leadership Committee, sponsors an annual workshop "to prepare group leaders for summer hiking trips in New England Mountain country." The June workshop begins at AMC's Pinkham Notch Camp at the base of Mt. Washington, N.H. For further information on this and other programs write or telephone: Appalachian Mountain Club, 5 Joy Street, Boston, MA 02108; telephone (617) 523-0636; or Pinkham Notch Camp, Gorham, N.H. 03581; telephone (603) 466-3994.

Swimming, Water Safety, and Small Craft Courses – The American National Red Cross sponsors swimming training programs for counselors at Camp Tevya of Brookline, N.H., Camp Kiwanee of South Hanson, Mass., Camp O-AT-KA, of East Sebago, Me., and Kiddie Kamp of Sharon, Mass. A Boating Safety Course is offered in Boston. Small Craft Clinics are offered at O-AT-KA, Kiddie Kamp, and in Boston. A Basic Sailing Course is also offered in Boston. For further information call or write: Water Safety Dept., American National Red Cross, Greater Boston Chapter, 99 Brookline Avenue, Boston, MA 02215; telephone (617) 262-1234, ext. 223. Application forms are available from any local Red Cross Chapter office.

Additional Training Courses – For information on Leadership Training Opportunities available in the New England area in all phases of camp work, call or write Mrs. Theresa E. Phinney, Executive Director, New England Camping Association, 29 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, MA 02116; telephone (617) 536-0225.

Community Sailing Program – While not a camp or day camp in the usual sense, the sailing program conducted on the Charles River each summer is an important low-fee resource to engage the time and interest of Boston's young people – either in conjunction with or as an alternative to camp or day camp enrollment. The junior program will be of particular interest to 11 to 17 year olds. Further information is available from Community Boating, Inc., 21 Embankment Road, Boston, MA 02114; telephone 523-1038.

CAMP STAFF EMPLOYMENT

For paid employment in agency camps, men and women, 19 years or older, should apply to individual camps listed in the Campfinder. A personal interview is usually desirable for both the camp and the prospective staff member.

Application for employment can be made any time after the first of the year. Job interviewing would be facilitated by providing an outline of work experience, educational background and special interests and skills. Also of significant help would be two or three references from former employers or teachers who are in a position to judge your capacity for working with children.

For employment in A.C.A. accredited Resident Camps, contact Mrs. Theresa E. Phinney, Executive Director, The New England Camping Association, 29 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston, MA 02116.

Minority Group Counselor Training – The United Community Planning Corporation of Boston has sponsored an annual program of recruitment, training and placement of minority group young people who desire to become involved in camping as counselors. The program, initiated in 1972, offers training under the leadership of skilled persons in the fields of human relations and camping, followed by employment as a counselor in a New England Camp. For further information contact Mr. Edwin C. Johnson, Senior Planner-Camping Services, United Community Planning Corporation of Boston, 14 Somerset Street, Boston, MA 02108; telephone (617) 742-2000.

Volunteer Work

To volunteer your services in a resident or day camp., contact Voluntary Action Center, 14 Somerset Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02108; telephone (617) 742-2000, Extension 310.
